Tired Out, Financier Spends a Night with the Men in Their Boarding House.

Mr. Rockefeller began talking to the mule driver, then suddenly: "Look there," he demanded: "why is that mule chafed and bleeding from the harness." The embarrassed driver stammered an explanation. Mr. Rockefeller walked sround the animal, pointing out several places where its skin had been worn by the harness. Finally the combined eloquence of all the mine officials present sufficed to persuade the man of millions that "green" mules always suffered abrasions from the harness until their skin became calloused. Then, half satisfied, Mr. Rockefeller resumed his walk.

ness until their sain ordan resumed his walk.

Mr. Rockefeller went into the mine spic and span and came out begrimed and dusty. He told the men he was not in the least afraid of dirt. He continued his inspection of the workings for more than two hours.

After arriving at the surface he visited about twenty families in the village. Then he had lunch with his party, which included W. MacKenzie King, of the Rockefeller Foundation, after which he left for Segundo.

Late in the afternoon Mr. Rockefeller reached the Primero camp. Tired out, the financier announced he would not return to Trinidad, but would spend the night with the men in the camp.

Mr. Rockefeller ate dinner in the miners' boarding house and spent the miners' boarding house and spent the early evening talking with the men who had just come from the underground workings.
